Not illustrated. 1892 Excerpt: . . . lord, that his pale meagreness cannot blush at such a speech as this! In his speech at the censure of Bastwick, Burton, and Pryn, he observes: This is the misery, tis superstition nowadays for any man to come with more reverence into a church than a tinker and his bitch come into an ale-house. The comparison, he adds, is too homely, but my just indignation at the profaneness of the times makes me speak it. If we turn from the style to the substance, and try to ascertain what Lauds real opinions were on the subjects on which his mind was most exercised, it will be very difficult for any fair critic to speak with contempt of him. The two great subjects on which he thought were religion and politics, which indeed in his age were only two sides of the same subject. His position in...
