Excerpt: . . . places; but I will give the plan laid down for the City of Ham burgh. As that city has not enjoyed the advantage of such complete education as the rest of Germany till comparatively lately, the authorities there have had the advantage of the experience of Prussia, Saxony, and the other states; and therefore the syllabus laid down may be expected to be at least as good as any, and will sufficiently illustrate the differences in the extent of the curriculum. COURSE OF INSTRUCTION IN HAMBURGH. The syllabus of instruction in the public Elementary Schools for Boys, prescribed in conformity with the Education Act of November. 1870, includes the following subjects: --(1) Religion, (2) German, (3) English, (4) Cultivation of the Perceptive Faculties, (5) History, (6) Geography, (7) Natural History, (8) Natural Philosophy, (9) Arithmetic and Algebra, (10) Geometry, (11) Writing, (12) Drawing, (13) Singing, (14) Gymnastics. As far as circumstances permit, instruction in French may also be given; bat the express consent of the School Authorities is necessary in each individual case. The course of instruction under each of these heads is detailed for each of 7 classes in the following manner; each class corresponding to one year of a childs school life. German. Class VII. --Speaking Exercises, Cultivating the Power of Observation. The division of words into syllables and the syllables into sounds. Reading written characters. Reading (to be practised both simultaneously and individually) with clear and correct pronunciation. Easy Exercises in...
