Worn down, at length, in body and mind, with these accumulated evis, and not meeting with even an alleviation of his. distress, from the many nervous and other medicines which he had tried, he went to Bath, where he was greatly relieved by an ingenious Physician. He often after that, had recourse to those salutary waters; but from the first time he used them, he had short fits of the Gout every year, sometimes in the feet, sometimes in the hands; and as those sits were more or less complete, he was more or less relieved by them, and continued well a longer or shorter time after them. In the spring 1766, he had a fit of the Gout, which going off too soon, left..
