A very awesome book with perfect and lucid reasons. It really is basic but shocks within the 50 percent of the book. Its been designed in an exceptionally easy way and is particularly merely right after i finished reading this ebook where in fact changed me, change the way i think.

The destruction of insects by fumigation with poisonous gases or vapours has long been carried on in greenhouses; but that the process could be economically practised in orchards remained to be demonstrated in California little more than a decade ago. In the first report of the Board of State Horticultural Commissioners of California, published in 1882, unsuccessful experiments with steam to destroy scale insects on tent-covered trees without injury to the foliage are recorded by Commissioner S. F. Chapin. A few years later, Alexander Craw, the present entomologist of the California State Board of Horticulture, and Mr. J. W. Wolfskill carried on many experiments with a number of different gases. The work of these gentlemen impressed D. W. Coquillett, then a special agent of the Division of Entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture, and the three united their efforts.
